Fight on Funkhouser.

"It's a mighty hard matter to get a man for a Federal office in Virginia against whom charges of some sort are not filled." said an official of the Postoffice Department to-day.

"You mean it is hard to get a Republican of that kind," suggested The Times-Dispatch correspondent.

"That's what I mean," assented the official. He was talking about the trouble the President is encountering in getting a postmaster at Roanoke. The nomination of Funkhouser to the position is now being held up in the Senate. The name of Hart, which was sent to the Senate by the President, was withdrawn because of charges made affecting his business integrity, and then the President appointed Mr. Funkhouser.

Senator Martin said to-day be had received letters and telegrams from Roanoke people asking him to have the nomination held up until charges gainst Mr. Funkhouser could be filed. He saw Senator Secot, of West Virginia, a member of the Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, who always considers nominations to Virginia postmasterships, and the latter agreed not to ask for action for some days, at least. The Haddecks were married in 1888, and the husband claimed to have been an unwilling participant in the ceremony. He says in his answer to the woman's complaint that he left here immediately after the marriage rites were performed, and during all the time that has intervened has seen her only three times. In 1881 he secured a divorce in the State of Connecticut, where he then resided, and in 1882 was married to another woman. The New York Supreme Court held
